the 1990s, the number of people with a mental health problem has increased by 50% (Mental Health Foundation 1999).

There is a growing awareness of the need to address the needs of people with mental health problems, and a number of initiatives have been developed to improve the lives of people with mental health problems (Mental Health Foundation 1999).

One of the most important initiatives is the development of self-help materials, which can help people to manage their condition and improve their quality of life.

Self-help materials can be developed in a number of formats, including books, pamphlets, and audio cassettes.

They can be developed for a wide range of mental health problems, including depression, anxiety, and schizophrenia.

Self-help materials can be developed for people with a mental health problem, or for people who are at risk of developing a mental health problem.

Self-help materials can be developed for people who are already receiving treatment, or for people who are not receiving treatment.

Self-help materials can be developed for people who are living in the community, or for people who are in hospital.
